LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1867.

Parties as well as men are to be judged to the lands of those who are clarations. We can ascertain the parposes of men, and find of their motives, more by their deeds than by their words. The whole legislation of Congress for the last two years, which he been under the padare and direction of the New England radicals, shows the deliberate purpose skilfulip planned, but artfully concelled, of Africanizing the extreme Southern or Gulf States. This is no new idea with them, but one of many years standing. Long before the recent war, Mr. Sumner, who is the best representative of New England radicalism, declared that their object was to encircle the slave with a belt of free States in order that "slavery, like a scorpion girt with fire, might sting itself to death." This poincy was to coache the institution of slavery within its then limits, not permitting it to go to any of the new States of Territorics, and at the same time to make it insecure in the border States, as they were called, by hostile legislation, in order that all the slaves might be envised to the extreme Southern States where slavery was nore perfitable. This collecting of all the slaves in the few Gulf States will, with their ant rad increase, have given in ten or officen years a back poulation, and like a legislation of lacks in a much greater prepondermose than they even now are.

The New England radicals did not at that time, either expect or desire the internal time to make it insecure in the border States, as they were called, by hostile legislation, in order that all expectations are the consum respective. The same time to make it insecure in the border States, as they were called, by hostile legislation, in order that the slaves might be expected by the seal for the Northern people. Having the proposed the new States of the North people of the North. This collecting of all the slaves in the few Gulf States will be prevented to the consumination of the Northern people of the Northern people of the Northern people of the Northern people of the grain, a few logs and cattle, and a small amount of cotton.

The New Legland manufacturers think the blacks, left to themselves, will raise enough cotton to supply their mills, and this is all they desire. They do not wish any cotton exported to foreign countries. By means of the Freedmen's Bureau agents, who will at the same time be their aspents, they hope to coutrol all the cotton that may be raised in the South. By means of a prohibitory tariff, they expect and intend to keep out foreign competition and thus he able to put whatever price they may wish upon cotton tabrics.
